

Parent Tip #39

Listening

- Our children can often contribute significantly to social situations because they are often extremely creative and provide a unique perspective to any situation.
- Parents and teachers can nurture the “perceptual differences” and encourage the child to express themselves in a way that their peers and others accept.
- We do not want to silence their creativity, it is their gift to the world, but we do want them learn to listen to what others to "fit in" with their peers.
